

Q2 2026 · THE ANNA MARIA ISLAND OWNER'S BRIEFING

Anna Maria Island Q2 2026 Report

Anna Maria's single-family market broke almost every recent record in Q2 2026, and it did not move as one market. Three price tiers behaved differently, with new construction concentrated in the top two.

If you have owned on Anna Maria for a few years, you are a stakeholder in one of Florida's most talked-about coastal markets. I have spent this quarter watching it separate into three markets that no longer move together. Out-of-state buyers competed for turn-key inventory that is not being replaced fast enough, and the mid-market quietly reset into what other beach towns still call their top. Whether you are weighing what your property is worth, timing a listing, or waiting on the right home, the tier you are in matters more than the island-wide number.

The takeaway: The $2M to $4M range is where demand shifted hardest, with sales more than tripling even as the average price within the band came down. Find your tier before you price. What happened island-wide probably did not happen on your street, and I would rather tell you that than let a headline number set your expectations.

— BUYING ON THE ISLAND

What buyers ask, and what they are buying.

FAQS

Buying AMI new construction

What are the key architectural features of new construction homes on Anna Maria Island?

Modern new builds on the island feature elevated living spaces compliant with strict coastal flood zones, reinforced concrete block construction, impact-rated windows and doors, standing-seam metal roofs, and private resort-style outdoor pool areas designed for luxury coastal living.

Do new construction properties on AMI make strong investment assets?

Yes. With active inventory tightly constrained and new construction demand surging, turn-key new properties capture high-paying out-of-state visitors while commanding exceptional seasonal rental revenue from corporate retreats and multi-family groups.

What should buyers look out for regarding zoning and location on the North End?

Evaluate lot setbacks, parking requirements, and coastal environmental restrictions. Properties on the North End of Anna Maria offer a quieter, Old Florida neighborhood feel combined with immediate proximity to gulf beaches and local dining like The Waterfront and Harry's Grill.

How fast are homes selling on Anna Maria right now?

It depends on where the home sits. Waterfront, beachside and canal properties are each moving on their own timeline. Ask us and we will pull what is selling in your immediate area.

MODERN LUXURY LISTED

107 Tuna Street, Anna Maria

Asking $7,750,000

- 3,200+ SF of covered outdoor space
- 6 bedrooms · 5.5 baths
- 50 feet from the beach sand
- Primary suite, kitchen, living room and laundry on main floor
- Thermador appliance package
- 48' x 25' resort-style pool and spa
- Custom cabinetry
- Upper-floor Gulf sunset views

The takeaway: Elevated new construction is what the out-of-state buyer pool is competing for, and there is not enough of it. If you own an older home or a homesite on the island, that scarcity is working in your favor right now.
